THE PROGRAM

.....TONY GWYNN

Anthony Keith Tony Gwynn is a former San Diego Padres right fielder. Widely considered one of the best hitters of his generation, Gwynn played for the San Diego Padres (1982-2001). He threw and batted left-handed.

A graduate of San Diego State University where he also played basketball and set a school record for assists, Gwynn broke in with San Diego as a part-time outfielder in 1982, appearing in 54 games and batting .289. It would be the last time he would hit below .300 in the major leagues. Gwynn's breakthrough season was in 1984, when he hit .351, won the first of his eight batting titles (tying him with Honus Wagner for the National League record), and made the first of his 15 All-Star appearances.

Gwynn was also proficient with a glove for most of his career, winning five consecutive Gold Glove awards (1986-91). Primarily a right fielder, in 1989 Gwynn split time between right and center field. In 1994 Gwynn batted .394; the highest batting average in the National League since Bill Terry hit .401 in 1930 and the highest in the majors since Ted Williams hit .406 in 1941. Had the season not been shortened by a strike, Gwynn might have become the first batter to eclipse the .400 mark in more than 50 years.
